Martyn Wyndham-Read: Friday, September 7th; 7:30pm

House concert with Martyn Wyndham Read - fabulous songster from Down Under. In his late teens he left his mother's farm in Sussex, England, and headed off, with his guitar, to Australia where he worked on a sheep station in Emu Springs, South Australia. It was there that he heard the old songs sung by some of the station hands and he became captivated by these songs and their history. Back to England in 1967 where he met the renowned singer and song collector Bert Lloyd, who himself had spent time in Australia. Martyn was asked by Bert Lloyd to be part of the album 'Leviathan' on the Topic label and soon after he started recording for Bill Leader and touring extensively worldwide. We are thrilled to be able to hear him in this intimate house concert setting. At a private house in Forest Hills, Queens. Reservations essential - call Heather at 646-628-4604. Park Slope Bluegrass & O-T Jamboree, September 21-22

The sounds of banjos, fiddles, mandolins, guitars and big upright basses echo through the "hills and hollers" of Brooklyn. The Jamboree, held at the historic Old Stone House, MiddleSchool 51, and J.J. Byrne Park, starts with a bluegrass concert on Friday night at 8 pm (doors open at 7:30 pm); Saturday afternoon is 12:30 to dark and the concert is 6-10pm.. Saturday includes a full day of activities, with workshops in banjo, fiddle, harmony singing, autoharp, and more, plus all day jamming and an evening concert; food will be offered on site on Saturday. Elias Ladino Ensemble + Mara Goodman, Sat., Sept. 29th, 8pm

Mara Goodman is a classically trained vocalist and a folksinger whose extensive repertoire includes Jewish songs in Yiddish, Hebrew, Ladino, English, and Arabic.

The Elias Ladino Ensemble, founded by the late Joe Elias and now led by his son Daniel Elias, is one of the very few Sephardic musical groups whose vocalists are native speakers of Ladino. They are the real deal, having been born and raised in the Sephardic Ladino musical tradition, rather than having learned their songs and tunes solely from records, books, and sheet music.

September is almost here as I write this column, and we hope that you will be receiving your newsletter in a timely fashion. If you haven't, please let us know, because we will have to go back to the old way of mailing the newsletters, and we will definitely need your help.

Musically speaking, September starts the season off with our usual Irish Traditional Music Sessions, Sunnyside Singers Club, the Folk Open Sing, the Shanty Sing and our fabulous Board Meeting. Note that the Board meeting this month is on the third Monday, September 17th because of Rosh Hashanah.

On September 29th, at the People's Voice Café, the Elias Ladino Ensemble and Mara Goodman will be performing.

We also have sad news. George Sprung, Roger Sprung's brother, passed away. Laura Shechter also passed away. See Ruth's Column and the article about Laura. We also just heard that Michael Kaye passed away recently in August. Our lives were richer because of them, and we shall miss them.

The Folk Process

by Ruth Lipman

Ann Green writes: "I have more bad news to report. On July 24th George Sprung died at the age of 91. George was a folk music and jazz devotee, a long-time club member and an all-around good guy." Condolences may be sent to Rebecca Sprung, 255 West 88th Street, Apartment 7B, New York, NY 10024-1717.

Michael Kaye died in August. Services were held August 14th, at Conservative Synagogue Adath Israel of Riverdale. The club extends condolences to his wife Rebecca, daughter Ariel, and the rest of his family.

Laura Shechter died in May. Gary Goodenough contributed the brief biography of Laura's career as an artist, on the next page.

We have some good news too. Evy Mayer sent in the following:

In July, Evy Mayer attended the AAAA (The Antique Advertising Association of America) Convention in Chicago. The organizer of the convention finally twisted her arm enough to get her to agree to do a presentation. Here is the description: "Evy has been collecting since childhood. It all started with miniature figurines. A chance encounter with another collector at a New York City street fair, soon after she had started collecting sample talcum tins, led to her joining the now defunct TCCA (Tin Container Collectors of America). While miniatures were the focus of her collecting, even small things start to add up and take up space. The next challenge was how to display all the stuff in a New York City apartment. Evy let us in on how she has found ways to show off her collectibles, sometimes even using more collectibles in the process." The presentation was a big success, with many collectors expressing admiration at how she has displayed everything. Evy will follow up with photos and articles in Checkerboard, the AAAA online magazine, so people can see her collections in more detail.

Barbara Mehlman shares some information about her life:

"After spending six weeks in Firenze, and six weeks in Verona, studying Italian in both cities, I decided to continue my studies here in New York with the goal of becoming fluent and eventually teaching English in Italy. In April, I returned from a vacation to southern Africa that included South Africa, Zimbabwe, Botswana, and Namibia. In July I spent a week in Bar Harbor eating lobster rolls every day. I just returned from northern Italy with my granddaughter Olivia (Alison's daughter). I will return to Italy for the month of October doing an in-depth tour of Rome and a week of cooking in Tuscany. The rest of the time I'll be bumming around, eating, sightseeing, and visiting new friends. Both Alison and Melissa are doing well, and Melissa's older boy, Jack, just graduated from high school. He'll be attending the University of New England in September because he just loves Maine. Next year, I'll be going to Sicily, Morocco, Memphis and Nashville, and maybe Newfoundland. I'm loving retirement but I do more than travel. I started a small company called Technology for the Terrified and I give workshops to seniors to help them communicate with their adult children who refuse to speak to them on the phone. Life is good and I hope it is as good for all of you."

If you have news to share, contact me at 372 Central Park West; #15B, New York, NY 10025; 212-663-6309, ruthlipman(at)msn.com.

Notes about Laura Shechter's Career

As we enjoy the company of the people in our song-circles, it can come as a pleasant surprise to learn about their interesting careers and professions. Laura Shechter was one such person. Laura, and her late husband Ben were long-time members of several song-circles, including the Brooklyn Wednesday night group, and the Sea Chantey group in South Street Seaport (now in Snug Harbor).

Laura loved music, but her life's work was art. She had been a devoted social worker after graduating from Brooklyn College in 1965, but after her first solo show in 1971, painting became her sole career. She was very hard-working and prolific. Her paintings were presented and sold in galleries in NYC, as well as Florida, and places as far-flung as Detroit and Oklahoma City.

The substance of her work, at the beginning of her career, was meticulously rendered still-life images of interesting decorative objects, in domestic settings. The form was called Photo-realism, and Laura approached the work in a very cerebral, intellectual and technical way. Yet the paintings are completely accessible and beautiful.

To quote her friend Louise Luger (also an artist):

"...the work was excellent, both in composition and technical skill. In those days, she used to say her work represented 'problem solving' - which I believe she meant in a technical and artistic way. But I always saw a nostalgic element to the painting; a tablecloth that an aunt may have had, the type of vase your grandmother set on the mantle piece, the plate of fruit your grade school pal's family placed upon the table in case someone dropped by. These 'prosaic' visions could evoke memories, and a feeling of a certain time and group of people, now encased in an artistic description of a domestic scene, as a fly in amber. A realist artist like Laura may just be representing an arrangement of shapes or a moment in time (as we photographers do) - but the work of art can transcend the plastic elements of the composition, and gain a personal meaning for the viewer."

In more recent years, Laura expanded her technique and vision, and began to paint urban landscapes, treating the static architecture like a still-life arrangement. This presented many challenges, but the paintings were very well received and Laura enjoyed pushing the boundaries of her skills and artistic vision. Laura and Ben walked many miles around the city, looking for vistas to capture in her paintings.

The success of the Urban Landscapes led to another career direction; the graffiti paintings. The presence of graffiti on the buildings in Laura's paintings brought an expanded audience for her work. It was a wonderful serendipity. Laura started an additional project, with a focus on the interaction between urban architecture and street art.

Just this summer, Laura had received a $20,000 grant from the prestigious Lee Krasner foundation. She was preparing to travel to Detroit and then to London, to study, and work. She was still making arrangements for this when she entered Weill-Cornell-Presbyterian Hospital, back in May. Sadly, the treatment for her Lymphoma did not go as expected, and the ensuing complications were fatal.

Laura's art can be seen at the Brooklyn Museum, www.brooklynmuseum.org/easca/feminist_art_base/laura-j-shechter

THE JOHNSON GIRLS have been a force on the folk and maritime music scene for over two decades as the leading all-woman, a cappella maritime group in the world. Believing that songs of the sea were the first real “World Music”, Joy Bennett, Alison Kelley, Bonnie Milner, and Deirdre Murtha each bring a special influence to the group. No matter the venue, The Johnson Girls remain true to their mission keeping chantey singing and its history alive, bringing women’s voices to the fore. www.thejohnsongirls.com

SKIP GORMAN was introduced to traditional music at the age of eight, when he received his first guitar and a Jimmie Rodgers record. Growing up, he was lucky to hear musicians like the legendary Texas fiddler Eck Robertson, Bill Monroe, and Maybelle Carter at the Newport Folk Festival. An encounter with Monroe at age fourteen was a pivotal moment in the young musician’s life. Aside from being a masterful cowboy singer and fine fiddler, Gorman is one of the premier mandolinists in the style of Bill Monroe. <http://skipgorman.com>

LARRY KAPLAN a multi-instrumentalist and fine singer, has penned some of the best contemporary ballads from New England and beyond. His compositions are respectful of tradition, honest, highly singable, and always memorable. Larry worked for many years on traditional vessels in Maine, sailed on and helped restore the Schooner. Larry has released four CDs through Folk Legacy Records, Folk Roots Magazine has called Larry’s music “some of the most finely crafted songs in folk music today.” He is the recipient of multiple best folk CDs of the year from leading folk radio programs, and tours regularly in Europe and the US. www.larrykaplanmusic.com
